HIV/STD Testing

Most HIV tests do not look for HIV virus, but rather for HIV antibodies, which are proteins made by your body to fight disease. If the antibodies made to fight HIV are found, it means HIV virus is also present in the blood. Antibodies are usually detected between 2 and 12 weeks after infection, but may take as long as 6 months in about 2 percent of the population. People who initially test negative are encouraged to get a follow-up test within 3 months after a possible exposure to HIV. For more information on HIV/STD Testing visit www.hivla.org.

HIV/STD Testing

Most HIV tests do not look for HIV virus, but rather for HIV antibodies, which are proteins made by your body to fight disease. If the antibodies made to fight HIV are found, it means HIV virus is also present in the blood. Antibodies are usually detected between 2 and 12 weeks after infection, but may take as long as 6 months in about 2 percent of the population. People who initially test negative are encouraged to get a follow-up test within 3 months after a possible exposure to HIV. For more information on HIV/STD Testing visit www.hivla.org.

Post Exposure Prophylaxis (PEP)

Post Exposure Prophylaxis (PEP) is a combination of two or three anti-HIV medications that MAY prevent HIV infection if taken correctly and within a certain period of time after possible HIV exposure. Research suggests that PEP can reduce your risk of becoming HIV+ by approximately 80%. However, PEP is NOT a "morning-after pill" to prevent HIV and there is still not a cure for HIV or AIDS. . It is always best to prevent or minimize exposure to HIV by using condoms, not sharing needles, or harm reduction approaches. For more information on Post Exposure Prophylaxis (PEP) visit www.hivla.org.
